He often became "a hard worker under the ground." We have a number of hardy miners in Missouri who were taken into the pit in the old country (Wales) at 6, 7 and 8 years to act as trapper boys. These youngsters kept steadily at work until they were promoted to the position of assistants and then regular miners and thrived mightily under conditions which in most trades would retard their development—I mean, beginning work at that early age.

"It seems as if the influence had given the miner a nipper of a transcendence that he has not got. I have seen "It would surprise Dr. O'Leary if he knew how many men far past 60 were yet working in the mines at Bevier. Once Johnnie Griffith, who died a few months ago, was 84 years of age. He was the first man in the world to be 80 years of age before he died. He began as a trapper boy in Wales, his father carried him to America, and he lived his life as a miner. He will give you men who do not love him. Some believe his life is dangerous, others believe them impractical. Dr. O'Leary is too good for this world. But no one doubts his sincerity, his unselfishness, his great gifts, or the purity and nobleness of his character.

"The doctor's predictions cannot be overestimated. He knows the men, the life, and never thinks of experience. When Debs gave up politics to go into the trade union movement, and then a well-paid position in the trade union

Mr. Thomas has made some research at Brierley, the largest coal camp in the state, and finds that there are there a number of men who have been at work in the century and more on coal mines and are still vigorous.

"And here's another thing," remarked Tom Williams, a veteran who had to abandon the pit some years ago owing to a fall of rock. "You never hear a miner puff and blow when he rags. His mind is as good as an athlete's. His lungs are sound, although coated thick with coal dust."

"Nearly as good as Revier's lungs, coal for all purposes because it is cheap. Most other towns in these parts

They may have so often given him their sympathy and respect, but they have never inquired and traced the splendid strands of fraternity that come from good passages to the front of the mind. He is the very type of a tramp teacher, the life of a school, a symbol of democracy."

BRIGANDS OF TONKIN.

Lives of Native Soldiers Too Precious to Risk Against Them.

The outlaws in Tonkin when the French called pirates are properly speaking brigands who infest the country both on land and water.

One of the most famous of the leaders of the band who they have just murdered is a French officer. There the brigands openly and successfully defy the forces of the government. Long impunity in that quarter has made them numerous and formidable.

It is not, however, to be considered that the troops in the field consist of native soldiers whose lives are too precious to be risked in frontal attacks on brigand fortresses.

Just before the murder of the officer a band of brigands made their appearance in the vicinity of the town of Haiphong and Hanoi and inflicted loss on some native troops, who encountered them. Then this the resident set for a detachment of native regulars to deal a blow at the enemy. The troops were sent bravely into the field, but incurred heavy losses, which they had to meet upon a fortress, so to speak.

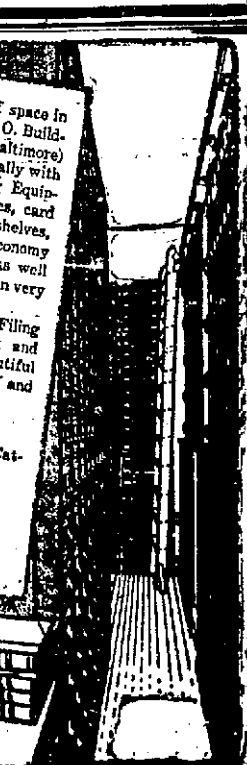

The commander of the troops found himself at a fix. To send the regulars across the open to carry the strong-hold by storm, under heavy fire from the brigands, meant heavy loss and certain death to many of his men to little purpose. The only alternative was to blow up the house along with the garrison. But this resource failed him from no explosives being at hand. The result was that the brigands escaped.

On a telephone later people wonder why the troops in the field are not armed with machine bombs. Such engines of destruction would save much loss of life among the soldiery operating against the brigands.

Yet the losses are blamed in the press though the brigands have often denied them safety from fortified houses, which the troops would not attack from fear of a loss of life and worth while to incur against outlaws.

THE MAYOR AND HIS COWBOY QUARTET

With His Cowboy Quartet He Will Make a Political Tour of Indiana and New York.

Something About the Man Who Was Mr. Bryan's Earliest Presidential Promoter.

THE present has been called an uninspiring campaign. There is an impression extant that the campaign poets are having a hard time. One of the newspapers complains that the campaign thus far has produced no songs that may be described accurately in any language as a family journal may employ with safety. The entire crop of this year's campaign poetry has been called dull and witless for want of better terms. The campaign poet has been accused of lack of spirit and, what is even more vital, lack of ideas. Listen to the wait, almost pathetic, of one of these pessimists:

"Bryan does not seem to stir them to single making as of yore. The two hills have suggested no humorous verse. Who can be facetious, joyous, tuneful, on the subject of Mr. James Sherman of Utah? Even the suggestive and easily rhymable name of Kern has inspired no telling verse. If the oratory of the campaign is to resemble the poetry in lifelessness and lack of the stirring quality, this will be a dull campaign indeed. Perhaps it is just as well. The voters will have nothing of an amusing or inspiring nature to disturb their thoughts."

Now, what do you think of that? No campaign minstrelsy, indeed! And all the time the political atmosphere is fairly surcharged with it. How about Governor Haskell of Oklahoma, with his thousand and one campaign songs, every one of them distinctly singable and beginning to be sung daily, nightly, even hourly, in the hotly disputed districts of everybody's land? How about James C. Dahlgren, the unique mayor of Omaha, and his famous cowboy quartet? The fact is that the campaign poet is not in hiding. He is quite as numerous and as active as in former years, and after state conventions are over the fruit of his industry will become apparent.

Mayor Dahlgren promises to figure prominently in the national campaign. It might be more proper to say that he is already a leading figure in the campaign and decidedly one of the most picturesque. He is, in fact, the original Bryan promoter from away back. In March, 1896, there was a convention at Lincoln, Neb., to elect a delegate to the national convention of that year. Mr. Dahlgren rose in his seat and offered a resolution to instruct the Nebraska delegation for Bryan. The latter was a delegate on the floor, and he did not want the delegation to go instructed, and he had considerable difficulty in convincing his enthusiastic supporter that the time had not come. Eventually Dahlgren withdrew the resolution, but he is entitled to the honor of being the first to set the Bryan boom afloat.

Who is he? He is a native of Texas and was born on a ranch. In his thirteenth year he resolved to emancipate himself from cotton hoeing, and without consulting anybody he gathered his scant belongings into a bundle and "it out" in search of adventure. He found enough of it on the cattle ranges of northern Texas to satisfy him until he had reached his twentieth year, when the microphone of migration got to work again, and young Dahlgren kept moving until he reached the great cattle ranges of western Nebraska.

Here he followed the typical cowboy life for three years and was then made foreman and was entrusted with the responsible mission of going to Oregon after a herd of 3,000 head of cattle. It took six months to drive this immense herd across the country on to the Nebraska ranges. Dahlgren admits that it was one of the most exacting responsibilities he has ever undertaken. The value of the herd was not less than $75,000, and that a young man of twenty-three should have been entrusted with the sole management of such an undertaking is proof sufficient of the confidence put in his ability and integrity by the owner of the cattle. Seven other herds of the same size belonging to the same owner were driven over the same trail by as many different foremen. The owner provided himself with a fine pearl-handled nickel plated six shooter which he made up his mind to present to the foreman whose herd was in best condition on arrival at the end of the drive. Young Dahlgren was the recipient of the testimonial, and that pistol is one of his most valuable possessions even to this day.

He Settles Down. About that time he was appointed state brand inspector for the Wyoming State cattle association, a position demanding the most careful attention to detail and the exercise of good judgment and impartiality. In 1884 he was married and settled at Chadron, one of the new towns in the extreme western part of the state, where the cattle business still flourishes. He was elected a member of the city council immediately and then served four terms as sheriff, an almost unprecedented record of popularity and efficiency of the border.

Chadron and Dawes county were strongly Republican, but Mr. Dahlgren was elected mayor of the town and re-elected without opposition. In 1892 he went to Chicago and helped nominate Grover Cleveland, and four years later he did a like service for Mr. Bryan. From 1896 to 1900 he was chairman of the state committee and carried the state at each election for the Democratic party, the only period that state has been in Democratic hands since its organization except in 1890, when Boyd was elected on the Prohibition ticket. He became a member of the national committee in 1900 and in 1905 was appointed to the executive committee. At the recent 1908 convention he was on the committee of arrangements and contributed largely to the success of the gathering. It was at this national meeting that his cowboy quartet came to the front and converted the vast new auditorium into a veritable temple of song.

By 1898 Dahlgren had outgrown Chadron. He removed to Omaha and after eight years of political ineffectiveness came out as the Democratic candidate for mayor of that city. The municipal government had been under Republican control for seventeen years, and there seemed to be little likelihood that a change was impending. Dahlgren ignored all the conventional methods of conducting a campaign and went to work in a fashion that was entirely his own. First of all, he organized the quartet of singers which accompanied him on his stumping tour and aroused an end of enthusiasm. These vocalists were attired in full cowboy dress, as was also the candidate for the mayoralty. The opposition endeavored to make capital out of this informality, but it made a decided hit. The leading newspaper of the city declared that young Dahlgren elected his conduct with a veto machine. In reply the candidate confessed that he was doubtful about the message, but protested that he could write "Nothing doing" across the document. He was accused also of being a confirmed poker player. Dahlgren admitted it in a public meeting, adding that if any one present thought he could beat him he would be given an immediate opportunity. Instead of injuring his political prospects these frank admissions won him so many votes that he was elected by about 3,000 majority. Still an Expert. That he has not lost his cunning as an expert manipulator of the lasso was made evident on Mr. Bryan's return from his globe circling tour. In company with 125 other Nebraskans Mayor Dahlgren went to New York to welcome their distinguished friend and neighbor. The party procured boats and rowed out in the bay to meet the incoming ship, and from one of these small craft Dahlgren roped Mr. Bryan as he stood on the deck of the ocean liner. Mr. Bryan declared laughingly that although he had been "roped in" at various times this was a variation quite new to him. This is the rough and ready American who has done his best to advance the interests of his fellow Nebraskan and political hero and will continue in the effort until the day of election. He has volunteered to assist in the campaign in Indiana and New York, and wherever he goes his cowboy quartet will be his bodyguard. Those who believe that campaign melody is among the "lost arts" will be given an opportunity to see their mistake. It will not be long before the campaign poet's dog harness must be turned loose on the great voting public. Bands of "sweet singers" are organizing in all parts of the country, and we are certain to have an opportunity to join in the chorus of

THE BRYAN BATTLE HYMN.
(Chorus: "Battle Hymn of the Republic.")
The hosts are marching onward to the great redemption day,
Their hearts are filled with courage, and their voices shall be heard,
Hark! hear the mighty shouting that resounds along the way
As we go marching on.

CHORUS.
Bryan, Bryan, halldelish!
Bryan, Bryan, halldelish!
Bryan, Bryan, halldelish!
As we go marching on.

Hear the chorus grandly swelling from the broad Pacific main
See the great and falling millions haste to join the glad refrain
Freedom and redemption ever is the cry of all the true
As we go marching on.

The glory of the nation from despoilers must be freed,
For Bryan is the watchword of our honor and our creed,
And we'll sweep the tide of victory over land of gold and greed
As we go marching on.

The oppressor of every station send a prayer of hope and trust,
Must we falter, then, my brothers, when our cause is right and just?
Up and onward! Victory beckons, conquer, then, we shall and must
As we go marching on.

This land our fathers gave us, heritage far and near,
Must we hear the yoke oppression in this realm of free?
By the God of all life's battles, shall this nation still be free?
While we go marching on.

And on the succeeding evening, at precisely the same place and hour, we are quite as likely to be regaled with:

THE DEMOCRATIC MULE.
Oh, why should the Democrat mule always kick
Against everything our nation may do?
He kicks and he-haws, he he-haws and he-haws
And settles up charges with not a word true.

A flicks old beast is this Democrat mule,
Sometimes he is for silver, sometimes he is for gold,
But little he cares what standard we have,
Anything for office if his motives were told.

But this ancient mule claims noble descent
From Jefferson and Jackson, whose worth is well known,
But if these noble men were with us to-day
This Democrat mule they'd surely disown.

But Bryan's a straddle this Democrat mule,
And Wall street is leading the mule by the head,
But the poor mule's so weak he can scarcely hold up
The heavy load, when he will drop dead.

GEORGE H. HICARD.

The Metamorphosis of William J. Connors, Once a Dock Laborer, Now a Millionaire Boss

IN the present presidential campaign there is likely to be less indifference in what is known as "mud slinging" than in usually the case. The acknowledged personal worth of the principals in the contest interposes an efficient check to the "revelations" which have been sprung on many an ambitious candidate at a moment when he could afford least to encounter them. So it has happened thus far that the minor personalities in the political drama now being enacted have been compelled to bear the burden of the game.

Perhaps the most conspicuous of these victims, in the Democratic camp at least, is William J. Connors, member of the New York Democratic state committee, reputed to be the real as well as the titular boss of the Democratic organization in the Empire State. In lieu of a wider field in which to exercise their wit and power of invention the campaign specialists of the opposition have selected Mr. Connors as best fitted to serve as the target for their keenest shafts.

One of the most agreeable features of the business, one that relieves it of much of its apparent ferocity, is that there is no one in the country who seems to extract more enjoyment from it than does William J. Connors himself. As long as all these political fun-makers confine themselves to the personal and physical characteristics of the boss they are welcome. It is only when his integrity is questioned that this man who has risen from the ranks assumes the defensive. Those who know him and the strict rule of business "squareness" by which he is dominated are quite as ready to frown on all attempt to belittle his sturdy preference for fair dealing, for it is the fashion in Buffalo, his native city, to believe that when it comes to the "show down" William J. Connors is as good as gold.

A Hazardous Beginning. Nor has Mr. Connors ever made any attempt to conceal the fact that his early life was a poor beginning for the big boss which rose before him. He was born fifty-one years ago in the quiet town of Buffalo, down on the Erie canal. Those who are familiar with the locality will wonder the more that any good could have come out of it. His parents were Irish Canadian, and he was the only boy. His father had been a sailor on the lakes in summer and a stonecutter on land in winter. The elder Connors was thrifty in his way, and when he had accumulated enough he invested his earnings in a small saloon near the Ohio basin. It was in the very heart of a district containing a dense population composed of freight handlers and grain scoopers, men who toiled all day and were likely to carouse all night.

It was a hazardous school for young Connors. That it made his unhealthy and even degrading impress Mr. Connors would be first to admit. His parents wanted him to have some education beyond that of the docks, and he was sent to the parochial school. He learned readily, but the confinement and the routine were not to his taste. After a year of it he declared that he needed no more—that he chose rather to roll up his sleeves and go to work.

His father gave a reluctant consent, and the boy went to work. His first job was that of a coal's assistant on one of the steamers plying between Buffalo and Duluth. It was not an attractive life, but he kept at it four years, eventually becoming chief porter. About that time he realized that the great physical strength with which he was endowed made him fit for the better paid but far harder work on the docks, of which he had seen so much and which he could do without an apprenticeship. Here he worked, and worked hard, until he was twenty-two. He had risen to the position of foreman of freight handlers, but he was ambitious to get rich, and to become the proprietor of a saloon near the docks seemed to him to be a distinct forward step. He didn't have much working capital, but from the first business came his way, and he prospered financially. He had become popular among his mates along the docks, and they became his patrons when he went into business. Just then his father died, and the son became owner of two prosperous saloons.

He made money, but he did not like the business, said so frankly and was constantly on the lookout for something more to his taste. One day during a big strike on the docks a brilliant idea came into his head. He knew all about the trouble experienced by the steamship companies that handled their own freight, hiring men who were frequently on strike, and suffering all sorts of inconvenience from the plan. The grain carrying steamers were saved all these difficulties because they unloaded with labor supplied by contractors who charged so much per thousand barrels. It occurred to Connors that package freight might be handled in the same fashion and that he was the very man to put the scheme into execution. It did not take him long to act after he had convinced himself of the feasibility of the proposition. He applied for the contract to load and unload all the steamers of the Fulton steamship line, one of the largest companies of the great lake region, and secured it. This great work made him rich, and since that time he has been adding constantly to his wealth until now he is far from all the wealth and power of any man in Buffalo save one, as yet, that is, in most other parts along the great lake. This he has become one of the most extensive individual employers of labor in America.

His Social Aspirations.

Along in the nineties Connors had made so much money out of his grain handling contracts that he began to be lunched out in other business ventures. Street car lines, breweries and several industrial enterprises. Success followed him after every venture, and he became a millionaire. With wealth came the longing for position and a burning desire to secure for his family an entrance into the company of the refined and educated. He forsook all his old haunts, moved into an exclusive section of the city, frequented the most expensive public resorts and soon became conspicuous as a prodigal spender and a wearer of huge diamonds and "extreme" clothing. All this he did and endured, not because the doing gratified his vanity, but rather because he knew no other way to attain his end and believed he was on the right track.

That this is the true explanation of his attempt to break into society is proved by his good natured willingness to accept advice in the matter from those who were his real friends. "Jim," said one of these latter off day, "you are missing a lot of your self wearing all those diamonds. It's absolutely idiotic."

"Maybe it is," admitted Connors ruefully. "I never think about it, but I have them worn and then I think that hasn't done it. But he took the hint, and thereafter he appeared without the gems."

Shortly after Connors bought his fine house on fashionable Delaware avenue a street railroad company which had a line crossing the avenue near the new house sent up a lot of rails which were to be used for repairs. These rails were dumped on the pavement with such a resounding clatter that the entire neighborhood was aroused. "It must be Mr. Connors moving in," observed his next door neighbor, who was a wit.

After he had moved into the fine new house Connors had his gardeners plant his name in big letters forming out of rock on the lawn. In front of his yard, "Goodness," he claimed an adjacent passerby, "gave me the down through through her legs. The poor man must think he is a railroad station."

The Connors of today, the Connors of Delaware avenue and the state committee, is not the man whose dominating ambition was to be the big man of the docks. The refining touch has been applied with such perspicacity that the metamorphosis is practically complete. It is only when he is very much in earnest that the old time ungrammatical proverbs make themselves perceptible for a brief moment and a recurrence of the rich brogue of his early life mellowed his speech. The William J. Connors of the present day is as quiet and unassuming in his dress and manner as if he had been born that way.

How does it happen that those who speak so uncharitably of William J. Connors forget that today there are hundreds of pensioners of this man in the old First ward of Buffalo who are being carried through their declining years in comparative comfort by his bounty and that the children of the poor in his old neighborhood are ready to call him blessed? PHILAS O. WOODSON.

THE JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER

OF PRIVATE LIFE

SEVERAL years ago it was understood that Mr. Rockefeller had had enough of it; that the fatigues of age had made him willing, even anxious, to shift the executive responsibility of the great concern which he had fashioned to younger shoulders. He did not deny that he had gone into at least partial retirement, and for several years he failed to visit the Standard Oil's headquarters at 20 Broadway, New York. Not long ago he testified in Chicago that he was not active in the trust's affairs, that others were responsible for the present policy of the concern.

It is a man of surprises. Now it is announced that he has emerged from his retirement and is once more the active, dominant head of Standard Oil, coming so immediately after he had taken the public into his confidence by telling the story of his life in a popular magazine. Mr. Rockefeller's return to the scene of his former activity is the occasion of much speculation as to the future policy of the great corporation.

Change in men now living has been the inspiration and the theme of so much journalistic effort as has John D. Rockefeller. Certainly no private citizen of this or any other country has ever been invested with such an undivided monopoly of universal interest. The Rockefeller, which in the earlier days he made little effort to cultivate, has expanded with his ever accumulating financial power, and it has long passed the point at which he might have controlled it. Beyond a clever aptitude for keeping his own counsel, he has shown no special taste for mystery concerning his own personal affairs.

His has not been the exclusiveness of a grand home. That he has not admitted the public to everything within his workshop is, after all, only in harmony with the established custom of those who are business men. There would be very little business.

Now it is true that Mr. Rockefeller shows a far more open head of the door to the public than ever known to a man of his position. We are not told what he is, he must be something equally conspicuous. The secret of his mastery of conditions may never be known. It is not at all probable that he could reveal it even if he would. But it does not seem likely that he has shared with some other man the secret of his success. He has become a public figure, and he has become a public figure in a way that is not natural for a man of his position.

A Public Apologist.

Mr. Rockefeller's apology for appearing in a magazine is as simple as it is clever. He says that it is too much to expect of a man of his position to be a public figure. He says that it is too much to expect of a man of his position to be a public figure. He says that it is too much to expect of a man of his position to be a public figure.

At the same time, he says that it is too much to expect of a man of his position to be a public figure. He says that it is too much to expect of a man of his position to be a public figure. He says that it is too much to expect of a man of his position to be a public figure.

been adjudicated by public opinion should be given to his friends. Mr. Rockefeller's views on modern corporations. What he says on the subject in this recent magazine personal exposition is substantially a resume of the opinion he expressed before the industrial commission ten years ago. In fact, he confesses that he still holds as he did in 1909 in reference to this matter. He recognizes that the modern corporation is now regarded with suspicion, and he admits frankly that there sometimes is reason enough for this. He does not deny that corporations may be harmful or mischievous, but he points out the danger of failure to discriminate between them.

It is his opinion that the corporation is here to stay, and he believes that industrial combination is a necessity. He thinks that if the Americans are to enjoy the privilege of extending their business in all the states of the Union and into foreign countries as well, corporations are a necessary part of the machinery. That these industrial organizations should be regulated by proper legislation was Mr. Rockefeller's advice to the commission in 1909, and he still adheres to that opinion. He even repeats his suggestion of ten years ago as to what that legislation should be. First let there be federal legislation, he advises, under which corporations may be created and regulated, and to this he adds the proviso, "if that be possible." If impracticable, let the state legislatures as far as possible encourage combinations of persons and capital for the purpose of carrying on industries, but making it impossible to penetrate fraud against the public.

In the First Person.

Nothing that has ever been said or written about the personality of Mr. Rockefeller is as interesting or as instructive as that which has come unmodified from his own lips and his own pen. Nothing that he has ever said or written is more characteristic of him or more enlightening as to his methods of taking the public into his confidence than the following little personal disclosure delivered at the Euclid Avenue Baptist church, Cleveland, O., in the summer of 1905.

"I was taught at the age of eight to drive a horse and to drive him just as carefully as a man could drive him. I remember very well the instruction of my father: 'My son, hold him very carefully going down the hill. Do not let him stumble, and when you are on the level road let him trot right on.'"

"I shall never forget that. I was taught to do as much business at the age of ten and eleven as it was possible for me to do. Among other things I was sent over the hills to buy cord wood for the use of the family."

"I knew what a cord of good, solid birch and maple wood was. My father told me to select only the solid wood and the straight wood and not to put any knots in it or any punky wood. That was a good training for me. I did not need my father to tell me or anybody else how many feet it took to make a cord of wood. I did not require the presence of anybody to enable me to secure from the man who sold that wood good measure."

"I was taught that it was the thing to do to keep the money and take care of it. I did not need my father to tell me or anybody else how many feet it took to make a cord of wood. I did not require the presence of anybody to enable me to secure from the man who sold that wood good measure."

"Among the early experiences that were helpful to me that I recollect with pleasure was one in working a few days for a neighbor in digging potatoes—a very enterprising, thrifty farmer, who could dig a great many potatoes. I was a boy of perhaps thirteen or fourteen years of age, and it kept me very busy from morning until night. It was a ten-hour day."

"And as I was saying these little things I soon learned that I could get as much interest for $50 loaned at 7 per cent—the legal rate in the state of New York at that time—as I could get for $100 loaned at 10 per cent. The impression was gaining on me that it was a good thing to let the money be my slave and not make myself a slave to money."

"I was in school, and my father had a number of children to take care of. He was not a rich man, but he kept me in school all the time until I was sixteen years of age. I had expected to go through college and enjoy the advantage that many of you gentlemen have enjoyed, and I congratulate you, but I cannot say that I regret that circumstances seemed to require me to begin to take care of myself."

"I left school at sixteen and entered a commercial school, where I remained for two or three months, and then, in the year 1855, I began to look for something to do, and all those years from 1855 to 1860 were very trying to those in business. After many days and weeks of earnest endeavor I succeeded in getting a promising new showing that if I would come back in the afternoon they would see if they would give me a situation. "I was there in the afternoon early. I happened to meet an old gentleman last summer, and he said to me: 'I was there, too, when you came on the sidewalk that day—the 29th of September, in 1855—when I saw you, and I know you, and I know that firm—forwarding and commission firm—wanted a young man in the office. I spoke to the gentleman.'"

Salary Not Important.

"As to the salary that I was to receive, I knew nothing about that until the 1st of January. I cared very little about that. I wanted the position. I found myself so much interested in the work. I enjoyed my work."

"I remember one of the things my employers did for me. They gave me a book, 'The Life of Amos Lawrence,' and that made a great impression upon me. Many of you have read that book—the successful Boston merchant who was such a useful man, who made such good use of his money."

"At the end of the second year of my service with this company I desired a salary of $500, and the man who had filled the position had received $2,000. My employer was willing to give me from the 1st of January of that year $700."

"The matter of the difference was a question which was under consideration, and meanwhile an opportunity offered to engage in business with a young man who was ten years older than myself. I had saved a little money, and, accordingly, on April 1, with some $500 of $500 that I had saved-up and a few thousands which my father loaned me at 10 per cent until I should become of age, I contributed my part of the capital, which was $4,000."

"We were prosperous from the beginning. We did a business of $500,000 produce-commission the first year. Our profits were not very large—I think $4,400—but I think it was better for me than the $800 which I had asked."

STUART A. JESSUP.

ORIGIN OF LIFE THEORY.

The latest developments of gastro physics and philosophy have taken a rather surprising turn. It is now held that life is and ever has been co-existent with time and space, and that we cannot admit that there ever was a beginning of time or of space, and that both of these are of infinite extension, so life never began, but always has been. The only effort at demonstrating the physical possibility of this has been made by Dr. Arrhenius of Sweden, who thinks that his theory of radiation pressure is sufficient to account for the distribution of life throughout the whole of the universe as we now conceive it. That is to say, he says that radiation pressure from our sun and from all of the stars which shine at night in the sky has been sufficient to propel minute bits of cosmic dust to the confines of the material world and that these can easily have been and are sufficiently large to carry the "spores" of life to infinity and wherever they light to start a new creation of life which by evolution may reach the highest development.

Training Native Female Nurses In the Philippines

What Has Been Accomplished In a Year

It was only last year that the Manila board of education raised the question as to the possibility of developing sufficient character and stamina in the Philippine woman to make her an acceptable trained nurse. After a good deal of discussion it was resolved to undertake the experiment. The initial step was the introduction into the Manila normal school of several courses in anatomy, physiology, hygiene, theory of nursing and domestic science.

The new movement established ten free scholarships for student nurses. The teachers in the various provinces were asked to select a certain number of young women best qualified by temperament and education for the work, and after a good deal of exertion on the part of all concerned a number consented to give the scheme a trial. In time the result was the formation of a class of eleven.

At first the work did not progress satisfactorily, one of the drawbacks most difficult to combat arose from the fact that the students were not long in making the discovery that they would be expected to perform duties which in the archipelago are delegated to low class servants. Under these circumstances they became discouraged, resolved to abandon the course and in several instances actually returned to their homes.

From the first these little women had to endure the sneers and even insults of their acquaintances. The Spanish "muchachas para dinero" (girls for money), one of the most despising epithets known to the Philippines, was applied to them every time they performed any service. It was almost a hopeless case, and it seemed for a time that the effort must be abandoned. As a last resort an appeal to the pride of the students was made. The scientific nature of their occupation was made prominent, and when they came to understand that disease is caused by something within the body and not by evil spirits continually on the alert to enter it, light began to dawn. Once free from these superstitions they were ready to apply themselves with renewed zeal and in time became a band of earnest and intelligent women possessed of an honest ambition to master the modern way of caring for the sick and to spread the new gospel among their ignorant and superstitious countrymen.

A Remarkable Showing.

After only a year's training these student nurses have developed the most remarkable capacity for the work. They have shown themselves to be far above the average in intelligence and readiness to accept the life which they have chosen. Now they are all in the hospital for their first year of practical training and are doing satisfactory work. The members of the medical profession in Manila are looking forward with confidence to the time when these trained Philippine women will be able to undertake the care of major surgical cases.

This year's preliminary class consisted of thirty-two students, and there are more than that number on the waiting list. A wide field of usefulness awaits these bright young women when they are graduated and return to their respective provinces in the most intimate personal relationship with the government educational bureau that this effort to train Philippine women in domestic science and hygiene will do more to promote the elevation of the sex in the archipelago than anything that has been tried. In spite of her degraded condition the mother is still the controlling influence in the Philippine home, and it is through her education and uplifting that the nurse must be reached.

It is not easy for those born in a progressive country to realize the paucity of knowledge in respect to the care of the sick which obtains in the Philippines. It is the custom, especially in the provinces, to consign the physically afflicted to the tender mercies of the very lowest class of local mediocrities. This individual is practically the native witch doctor. He is a fakir, poor and simple, illiterate to the point of absurdity and unmercenary as well. Although he is feared and dreaded, his supposed influence with the spirits in the wake of disease makes his cooperation a matter of necessity to the superstitious Philippine. The First Medical School.

It was not until 1871 that the Dominican university at Manila after centuries of existence, succeeded in establishing a department of medicine.

At that time there were only twelve practitioners of the modern school of medicine in the archipelago. Between that point and the American occupation progress was very slow. The mass of the population is still ignorant of the common laws of health and the preservation of life and is under the influence of centuries of the gross, old belief in malevolent spirit influence.

When Filipinos became ill the method of treatment adopted by their friends varied strenuously against his recovery. The first step was to confine him in a room as air tight as possible. Houses in the archipelago are not constructed in a way to secure adequate ventilation, but by dint of closing all doors and windows and stuffing every crevice with cotton or hemp fiber a closeness of atmosphere could be obtained which was satisfactory to those in charge. Not content with this, the next step was to assemble as large a company of relatives and friends as the sickroom would hold, all of them, men and women, smoking incessantly and talking at the top of their voices about everything and anything that was likely to distract the patient from his physical distress. Finally the mediocrities called in, and plans were discussed as to the proper means of expelling the unruly spirit that was making all the trouble.

Then it was that the helpless sufferer's real trouble began. Frequently the most violent physical interference was resorted to, such as beating the rich person with clubs with the expectation of making his body too uncomfortable a habitation for the spirit which possessed him. Leprosy and other venereal maladies were always treated in this brutal manner. In some instances in which the evil spirit was supposed to be unusually strong, a hot iron was applied to the neck of the patient and many deaths are hourly attributed from this cause. In one of the provinces the use of the hot iron was the approved medical method.

Miss Charlotte Linton, the American woman in charge of the Nurses' Training School at Manila, relates a pathetic story of a young girl down with the mumps. The American teacher of this school at which she had been a pupil bespoke the services of a regular physician and accompanied him on his first visit in order to explain his instructions to the orders. The astonished and indignant medical man demanded an explanation. He was told that the mediocrity had called after his visit of the day previous and had ordered the patient dead. "That is the way he keeps the death out," sobbed the distressed mother, still under the spell of the superstition which has been entrenched in the archipelago for centuries.

Two Baneful Influences. The native Filipino has not yet been converted from his belief in Aswang and Manguequim, and much of his effort is expended in keeping these mischievous spirits at a safe distance. The former is reputed to have the power to transform himself into a bat, a cat or an insect. Thus disguised, he is supposed to shadow the person he wishes to afflict, and when he finds him alone and unprotected Aswang strikes. Manguequim's specialty is to make it uncomfortable for the human race by means of swellings, which he is popularly credited with the power of producing on the body of any person in any place, at any time.

The training of native female nurses in the Philippines is one of the most promising results of the American occupation, and as a civilizing agency it will compare favorably with anything that is being done.

DISCOVERER OF ANTISEPTIS. Lord Lister, the English scientist, who received such an avalanche of congratulations on his eightieth birthday, is the discoverer of that antiseptic system of surgery which has already saved 200,000 lives. In the early sixties he was a doctor at the Edinburgh Infirmary. One day, turning to the assembled students, he said: "Gentlemen, I have frequently noticed that when severe injuries are received without the skin being broken the cases nearly always recover. On the other hand, trouble is apt to follow even in trivial injuries when a wound in the skin is present. How is this? I cannot help thinking that the man who is able to explain this problem will gain untold fame." Later himself became that man!

that there the women folk use it as an adornment, worn in bouquets of flowers. Scientifically named Pleurotus lux, its color designation is its glowing in the dark, even for twenty-four hours after plucking.

The minkito is able to boast that for 2,644 years the same dynasty has ruled over Japan. A railway train exits a greater strain on an iron bridge when it is quickly than when it is slowly moving.

JEST AND EARNEST.

"The hunter's moon is the name given to the full moon which is known popularly as the 'harvest moon,' owing to the fact that the light is so long in sinking that it gives the farmer a longer period of light than at other times of the year. It is so called, not because it enables the hunter to pursue his game at night, as is generally supposed, but because, the crops having been harvested, there is nothing to interfere with the pursuit of game."

"Wallpapering" the slang phrase for a beating, is of uncertain origin. It is said by some that the word has reference to Mr. John Wall, a G. O. member of the House of Commons, who "wallpapered" the French in 1805.

VIII's room. This is a plausible suggestion, but it is by no means necessarily correct. Thorton comes in "wallpapering" to bed, with "wall." Literally, the phrase "getting into a scrape" has a connection with natural history. In the days of the merry England of the greenwood the deer roamed at will and would frequently scratch up the earth with their fore feet, leaving a hole some three or four feet deep. This would be come hidden or overgrown with herbs, and to the peril of the wayfarer, who ran considerable risk of being tripped up or injured by reason of his having got "into a scrape," as the expression was said.

In Henry Pratt Johnson, the bishop of Rochester, England, has the highest honor in York. He was in the First command was the second cruiser, and his flagship, the Drake, brought from Tahiti, with the report was the smartest of the lot. "When there is nothing to do you needn't do it," he told his men on his last day. "But when there is a duty to be done, do it as fast as you can." He was a man of great energy and a great deal of common sense. He was a man of great energy and a great deal of common sense. He was a man of great energy and a great deal of common sense.

OF A MONEY MAKING SECTION OF THE EARTH

There is no investment on earth today that equals the richly productive lands of Fresno County. Paul Morton claims in an article here reproduced that the Mississippi Valley is "the most fertile in the world," and that "the people who live in it will be the richest on earth." If the richest people on earth are to live where the wealth is produced from the soil, then this great San Joaquin Valley will be that spot, for every one familiar with this section knows that we have every other place on the map beaten forty ways when it comes to producing money making crops. To share in the wealth of this valley and to have your children share it as well you must own some of this money making land. You will buy cheaper now than you ever will again. There will never be another square foot of earth more than exists right now. The supply for eternity is all here, while the demand will never cease so long as humanity inhabits the earth. It will profit YOU to get hold of some NOW.

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST

The Golden Future of California

THAT community which produces a surplus of staple articles that the world demands, and ships them to markets where consumers await them, will always be a prosperous community. The manufacture of raw products where they are grown into commodities whereby the bulk is reduced and the value enhanced is a legitimate method of beneficence. The one element which inevitably gives value to a product is exchangeability.

The average American, it seems to me, if he considers the matter at all, gives only passing thought to the resources of the West and does not stop to realize its enormous actualities—what has already been accomplished and what is yet to be done. The Mississippi Valley—and by that I mean the region between the Alleghenies and the Rockies—is the most fertile valley in the world, and the people who live in it will be the richest on earth. In that vast region lie the future prosperity and political destiny of the United States. Where there have been no great cattle ranches or miles of waving grain or immense orchards, irrigation is converting arid lands into rich farms.

Beyond the Rockies lies California, which will produce everything that can be grown in Italy. Italy supports a population of thirty-two millions, while California has about two million people. With the completion of the Panama Canal shiploads of people will go direct from Europe to San Francisco and be distributed on the Pacific Slope. The political centre of the country is steadily moving westward, while New York is becoming more firmly established as the financial centre. This is as it should be, for the political and financial centres should be as far removed from each other as the poles. New York might be said to be a large mirror, reflecting the condition of the West and South. If the country generally is prosperous, New York is happy. If the country is agitated and uncomfortable, New York is miserable.

Western farm lands have increased in value fourfold. Rates of interest have been reduced on mortgages or the mortgages have been paid off. Never before has the farmer owned so much and owed so little. Never before was the prospect better for his land advancing still further in value, and never, in any country, has the agriculturist had a better foundation or a better outlook. Never, in any rural community of the same age, has there been more anxiety on the part of the people as to how they were going to invest their surplus funds.

Fresno county is the banner county of the San Joaquin valley. That is why an investment in good land in this county is the best on earth. No other section produces as much wealth annually per capita as Fresno county and it all comes from the soil. In all the county there is no richer nor more prolifically productive spot than QUALITY COLONY. Any one who knows good soil will tell you after a careful inspection of QUALITY COLONY that it has no superior in Fresno County. It is a rich, mellow sandy loam, easy to work. QUALITY COLONY is surrounded by vineyards and orchards, all planted in the same kind of soil. The splendidly healthy appearance of these surrounding places is more convincing than any argument we could make of the richness of QUALITY COLONY soil. We want you to see this land and will gladly show you same at your convenience. It is due east of Fresno, on Ventura avenue, and is two miles north of Sanger. There are but 460 acres in the tract and a little more than a quarter has been sold. The price is $80 per acre. It is well worth $100 per acre and much nearby raw land is held at that price. Easy terms.

ROUSING WELCOME FOR BATTLESHIPS

Japanese Turn Out En Masse When American War Ships Appear In Bay of Tokio.

YOKOHAMA, Oct. 15.—Sixteen American battleships constituting the Atlantic fleet on its peaceful cruise around the world are riding at anchor today in the bay of Tokio, occupying a post of honor in front of a like number of Japanese men of war, the white hulls of the American vessels making strong contrast with the sombre hues of the Japanese.

In the bay, alive with bunting, gaily decorated tugs and steamers loaded with sightseers are steaming to and fro and launches from the shore and the war vessels are bearing uniformed officers on their official visits of welcome.

Preceded by its tender, the Yankton, the American fleet entered the harbor in a fog that hung over the bay and dropped anchor at 8:30 o'clock this (Sunday) morning one-half hour later than the time scheduled. The delay was due to the fog.

The first sensation that the fleet was at hand came at 8:45 a. m. when the guns from one of the sixteen Japanese battleships lying outside the breakwater fired a salute as the Yankton appeared through the fog. In a few minutes the fog lifted slightly, enabling the watchers on bay and shore to get a view of the fleet as it steamed slowly in its single file formation.

The fleet proceeded to its anchorage ground, and anchored in four columns in front of the Japanese fleet. When anchored, the fleet was met by a reception committee representing every department of the Japanese government and accompanied by attaches of the various foreign embassies and legations. The mayor of Yokohama, the Japanese ambassador, and other officials were present. YOKOHAMA, Oct. 15.—It was in the gray hours before dawn this morning when the Japanese fleet of America's fleet, which the Japanese fleet was dimly discerned, maneuvering off the entrance to Tokyo bay, while sixteen warships, the pride of Japan, in somber colors, swung at the water, buoyed out of the breakwater encircled by the purple hills. Already Yokohama was awake and the streets were crowded with excited people streaming from the surrounding country about, in rickshaws or in carriages, waiting their chance to get a glimpse of the great fleet.

From thousands of flagpoles and buildings and every point in the big city, the flags and streamers of the fleet floated, and the streets were lined with thousands of people waiting to see the fleet.

CONGRESS HOPE OF THE WOMEN

Suffragists Disgusted By Refusal of Roosevelt to Recommend Their Propaganda.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 17.—The reply of President Roosevelt to a delegation of woman suffragists which called upon him this morning and requested him to issue his annual message in support of the woman suffrage cause, which was brought out in the report of Kate M. Gordon of New Orleans, caused much discussion among the delegates at the annual convention here today of the National Woman's Suffrage Association.

"The president of the United States," said Mrs. Gordon, "whether a petition of one million reputable names will influence him to recommend in his message to congress, woman's suffrage. He goes on to say that he would not, demonstrating thereby that the only women have their constitutional right of petition—in declared by the highest executive of our government and a friend of woman suffrage as of no value."

"That an unusual effort will be made this year to obtain from congress some recognition of the cause of woman's suffrage is certain. The availability of this has been pointed out by many speakers at the convention and today there was a round table conference on the subject with Washington as a center of suffrage work."

Franklin figures in women's educational work today organized a branch to be known as the "college suffrage association."

CHINESE WOMAN AGITATOR IS FINALLY SET AT LIBERTY

PEKING, Oct. 12.—The publicity given the arrest in Shanghai of Madame Lin a few days ago as well as the opposition to her incarceration voiced by the better class of Chinese residents of her native city, has had the effect of inducing the authorities to set her at liberty. She was apprehended by the Imperial authorities because of her efforts to clear the character of a female teacher who was hounded last year, charged with revolutionary activity.

CAMPAIGN IN DEATHS MAY SOUTH IS ENDED

Taft Will Spend Today at Washington and Then Tour Through Atlantic States.

GREAT ASSEMBLY AT THE RICHMOND MEETING

Candidate Says That Whatever the Result of the Election He Will Continue Efforts to Rejuvenate the South.

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 17.—Judge Taft today finished his campaign in the South. He will breakfast at the White House tomorrow, and after spending the day will leave at midnight for New Jersey to speak through that state, Delaware, Maryland and West Virginia, arriving at Cincinnati Wednesday morning for one day's rest. The remaining three days of next week he will give to Indiana and to New York city and state.

As on yesterday and the day before, so today there was no variance in the cordiality of the South in receiving his first visit from a Republican presidential candidate. Judge Taft had been told by Republican leaders in every one of the Southern states that his visit had been awaited with interest and that his presence would be a great help to the cause of the South.

BRYAN URGES GUARANTY OF DEPOSITS

Addresses Great Crowd in Omaha Auditorium, Including Members of All Parties.

THINKS HE IS ABLE TO MANAGE SENATE

But Advises the Election of a Democratic House of Representatives and State Officers in His Commonwealth.

OMAHA, Neb., Oct. 17.—Every seat in the big auditorium here was filled tonight and standing room was in demand almost an hour before the time at which William J. Bryan was advertised to appear and for an hour afterward hundreds came and were unable to gain admission to the great hall. That it was an enthusiastic crowd and strongly favorable to the Democratic candidate was evident from the prolonged demonstration that greeted every reference to Bryan by the speakers who preceded him and the riot of applause that shook the great hall when every one of the thousands stood and waved their flags given to them by the speaker.

Mayor James C. Whelan presided over the meeting and back of him on the stage were the prominent Democrats of the city who had been designated as vice-presidents of the meeting.

Mr. Bryan, who was introduced by Mayor Whelan, came to the stage and was greeted by a cheering throng. He was dressed in a dark suit and a white shirt with a dark tie. He was looking directly at the audience and his face was lit up with a smile.

TURKEY ARMING TO CRUSH BULGARIA

Asiatic Troops Ordered To Europe—Efforts of Great Powers Seem Fruitless.

PARIS, Oct. 17.—The optimism prevailing in official circles up to today concerning the ability of the powers to maintain peace in Eastern Europe, was rudely shattered this evening on receipt of a telegram from the French ambassador at Constantinople, Sarrailh, announcing that Turkey had ordered the mobilization of her troops in Asia Minor, and tonight it is believed that a few hours will determine the issue of peace or war.

This is regarded as Turkey's answer to Bulgaria's refusal to accept compensation for her independence and to the powers which arranged the program in London for the international conference.

Instructions have been hurriedly forwarded to the French representatives at Constantinople and Sofia to renew the campaign of pressure and undoubtedly the other powers have sent similar instructions to their representatives at these cities urging moderation on the part of Bulgaria and Turkey.

The four among diplomats, however, the intervention may come too late and that the Bulgarians, in their present state of excitement, may accept Turkey's act as one of provocation and advance across the frontier, when a collision between the two would be inevitable and irreparable.

At a dinner at the Russian embassy tonight in honor of—Isaev, the Russian foreign minister, at which Premier Clemenceau, Pichon, the French foreign minister, and the Russian ambassador, and the British ambassador, were present, the Turkish ambassador, Naum Pasha, issued a denial that mobilization of the troops had been ordered either in European or Asiatic Turkey.

Peace Assurance Given

SOFIA, Oct. 17.—Sir George Buchanan, the British diplomatic agent, and Baron Von Romberg, the German consul general, called upon M. Pichon, the minister of foreign affairs, today to give assurance that the military measures undertaken by Turkey were only precautionary and that the port had informed Great Britain and Germany that Turkey had no intention to disturb the peace. M. Pichon in reply said that Bulgaria was willing to send the reservists to their homes if Great Britain and Germany would guarantee the preservation of peace.

This exchange of assurances had a tranquillizing effect and the minister of war countermanded the order calling out 15,000 additional reservists.

Information from the Turkish ambassador, however, regarding the local transportation of troops in Macedonia as no cause for anxiety. Only the transfer of army units from Asia Minor would be considered direct menace to Bulgaria. Such a transfer has not taken place and the Bulgarian government continues to act on the supposition that Turkey has no intention of going to war.

Bulgaria has sent a special delegate to Vienna for the special purpose of arranging, if possible, with the Oriental Railroad company.

Bank Official Sought to Fix Responsibility Upon President in Making the Record.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—That loans of hundreds of thousands of dollars in which Charles W. Morse was interested were made upon the authorization of President Curtin of the National Bank of North America on "fictitious" security, was the charge made today by a former bank official who did not regard as "adequate security" some of the collateral which was withdrawn from the bank's vaults from time to time by employees of Morse before the loans had been satisfied, and that the employees had been ordered to "abandon" their responsibility for the loans by affixing President Curtin's initials to the entries in the bank's loan books, was some of the evidence at today's session of the trial of Charles W. Morse and A. B. Curtin in the United States district court here.

Today's only witness was Adolph Rude, formerly assistant cashier of the defunct bank of North America, of which Morse was president and Morse the principal stockholder. He seemed a willing witness and described transactions involving Leslie E. Whiting, the youthful brokerage clerk, whose record was revealed yesterday as the heaviest of vast sums of money and "other" loans in which "fictitious" and "cooper" stocks figure as collateral. When he was turned over to counsel for Curtin and Morse for examination, a long effort was made to have him deny the effect that he was being pressed by the prosecution to give testimony for the defense, but he himself seemed to be not entirely satisfied with the defense.

Rude said in reply to questions that he was not so much concerned about the collateral pledged to secure the Whiting loans because "I understood that Mr. Morse, a night millionaire, was practically behind the loans."

COLOR LINE WILL BE ENFORCED ON WHITES

Negroes Establish a Large Skating Rink in Chicago for Their Own Race.

CHICAGO, Oct. 17.—The old Seventh regiment armory last night was opened as a skating rink for negroes. Every one of the 100 pairs of skates provided by the management was in use. The rink was crowded with skaters, and the atmosphere was one of joy and excitement.

There were colored policemen and attendants, but they had little to do. There was no overtaking of trouble, but the maintenance of order.

The elite set in the balcony—quaint old maudlin and members of the colored 406, whose automobiles stretched for a block outside. A small balcony in the hall is reserved for the use of the colored spectators, but only negroes are allowed on the floor, where the color line against the white people will be enforced as it is in other places against the negro.

Injured Before Auto Race

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 17.—Warning on the track on Oct. 16, the motor races at Elm Ridge here today, Frederick Dundee, the driver, lost control of his machine and crashed through the fence, while going at an estimated speed of a mile a minute. His head and face were badly cut, his nose was broken and his white steamer was completely wrecked. It is believed a fire burst and caused the accident.

ARMENIANS KILLED BY TURK TROOPS

Frightful Crimes Committed
By Soldiers Sent to Suppress Disorder in Asiatic Province.

BERLIN, Oct. 17.—There have been frightful massacres in Armenia, according to the Constantinople correspondent of the Berlin Tageblatt. "This paper today publishes a dispatch from the Turkish capital which states:

Armenians in Viran-Shehr have been massacred by Turkish troops. The women and children have been subjected to fearful treatment. "The troops were sent to Viran-Shehr to suppress the numerous townsmen, two-thirds of whom are Armenians, and they at once began to murder and slaughter. They are said to have completely avast-run the city. "The village of Viran-Shehr is in the heart of Turkish Armenia, between Konia and Kars. It is described as built upon the ruins of an old town, possibly Chaboras. Its population is not stated.

ALIBI ESTABLISHED FOR MRS. DE ZALDO

SAN JOSE, Oct. 17. Though Attorney Vic Scheller still refuses to tell who it was that shared his race during a three encounter in his office here on Monday evening, it has been definitely and completely established that Mrs. de Zalzo had absolutely nothing to do with the affair.

Mrs. de Zalzo is well known and highly esteemed in San Jose, where she has lived almost all her life. Her friends here and in San Francisco, where she is a notary public, took up the matter as soon as her name had been mistakenly connected with the assault on Scheller, and have secured indisputable proof that she could not possibly have had anything to do with it. The statements and affidavits which they have gathered entirely bear out Scheller's declaration in which Mrs. de Zalzo was excluded from participation in or knowledge of the assault.

CHINESE POSTOFFICE DOING BIG BUSINESS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—Chinese postoffice business is increasing rapidly. The business during 1907 showed a gain of 50 per cent over the previous year. The increase in the receipts over expenditures is correspondingly large. There are 2,807 working post-offices and postal agencies in China, an increase of 707 over 1906. The railway development in China, particularly the connection with the Trans-Siberian route, which permits London letters to reach Peking in sixteen days, is attributed to increased business. Consul McNally of Nanking reports that the division of the lower Yangtze River, comprising the provinces of Anhui, Kiangsu and Chekiang, with a combined population of 40,000,000, shows an addition of 500,000 postoffices; the total being 287. Nanking, Chungking and Peking join in this general increase.

FIRST SNOW FALLS ON MOUNT LOWE

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 17.—The first snow of the season fell on the summit of Mount Lowe this morning. There was as much of it on the ground and it was still falling scurrying through the air as late as 10 o'clock.

Between 6 and 7 o'clock the thermometer on the mountain summit in sight of Los Angeles registered 32 degrees and there was real ice on water outside the box here.

At 12 o'clock today there was a cloud burst in East Los Angeles which filled the streets with rushing water and made the crossings almost impassable for a short time.

The summer season here, which closed about a week ago, was a successful one and had stores as large or larger than months ago in a small place against the windows and upon the roofs of buildings. Little Garbage was done.

SHELDON AND STRAUS GIVE SHARP RETORTS

Each Politely Tells the Other He Is a Prevaricator in the Campaign
Discussion.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17. "If Treasurer Sheldon of the Republican national committee will appoint a committee of three or four respectable men who expect nothing from politics I will appear before them and prove that the committee is demanding the right of Wall street money," said Nathan Straus of the Democratic Business Men's League today. This was Mr. Straus' reply to a statement from Mr. Sheldon, printed today, declaring that the charge made by Mr. Straus yesterday that the Republican national committee is assessing Wall street men $500 each was a falsehood.

"You don't suppose I would have made any such statement unless I knew it to be true, do you?" Mr. Straus asked, and he continued: "I would not. I know it is true. Mr. Sheldon's reply that my statement is a lie is no argument. I won't say how much he has collected. But I am ready and able to prove the specific incident."

In the last presidential campaign when Judge Parker told about campaign funds and told of how they were being gotten by the Republicans, Mr. Straus declared that the statement was false, though it was true nevertheless. I believe that at that time Judge Parker's statements were false, but this man Sheldon knows he is telling a lie."

The statement of Straus was repeated to Sheldon, who said: "I don't think Mr. Straus would make that statement to me. I have no reply other than this to make except to ask how it could be possible for anybody to go into Wall street or any other place to make a levy."

Chairman Hillebrand, who was present when Mr. Sheldon made his statement that when the list of Republican contributions is published, it will be twenty days after the election, it will refute all of the statements that have been made regarding political levies or contributions. Mr. Straus said he believes from reliable information in his possession that the Republican electoral plurality in the next election would be as large as that of four years ago.

KILLED FOR BREAKING UP A HAPPY HOME

Man Shoots Lodging House Keeper for Inducing Wife to Leave Him,
Then Suicides.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 17.—Anything that she was responsible for, was owing him, Alvin Brown, with a revolver in each hand, rushed into the Union Pacific rooming house at 400 Greenwich street, San Francisco, today, and shot the landlady, killing her instantly. Brown then turned on the gas and shot himself in the chest, and then shot the woman again, killing her.

Brown rushed down a hall and up a flight of stairs to a room on the second floor, where he was captured by the police. He was found with a revolver in his hand and a bullet wound in his chest. He was taken to the hospital and died later today.

Mr. Brown had just telephoned to his wife, who was in a hotel, that he was coming home. He was found with a revolver in his hand and a bullet wound in his chest. He was taken to the hospital and died later today.

Kern on Bank Deposits
STAMPAULT, Pa., Oct. 17.—The guarantee of bank deposits advocated by the Democratic national platform, was taken up at length by John W. Kern, the party nominee for vice president in a speech before a good sized crowd of business men and others in Reading, Pa., today. He declared that "no valid objections have as yet been urged against the proposed system of making depositors secure."

White House or Poorhouse.

Dr. C. L. Kratz, of Anthony, has been an independent in politics all his life, but he has had the good fortune to know some mighty fine Republicans, so he leans a trifle toward Republicanism. He was working in Columbus, Ohio, when McKinley was governor and often met him and worked in Indianapolis when Harrison was running for president and got to know him quite well. He often met Mrs. Harrison, who took meals at the same boarding house while Mr. Harrison was away and, in commenting on the costs of the campaign, she told Mr. Kratz that "it is either the White House or the poorhouse when the campaign is done." From the Kansas City Journal.

Squirrels Fight Man for Nuts.

This is going to be a long and very cold winter, complained Abram Peck, a Board Brook N. Y. farmer, yesterday. "The squirrels know it, and they are laying in an extra store of chestnuts."

About twenty squirrels attacked my furman when he was up a tree picking chestnuts yesterday, and bit him so badly he needed a doctor. Squirrels attacked a neighbor's boy. He killed two with a club but the others only went for him more savagely.

Squirrels never attack any one unless the nut crop is small like this one, and there is a hard winter ahead," New York Dispatch to Hartford Times.

A woman from Philadelphia brought to New York with her one of those little spy window curtains, popular down there because housewives can look out from their sitting rooms and tell the identity of callers before sending down word whether they are at home. This bred-in-the-bone Philadelphia attached the curtain to a window sill in her Brooklyn apartment and proceeded to feel at home because of the presence. Within a week the owner of the apartment requested her to take the spy window down.

"The people in the next flat complain that you are trying to look into their rooms," the owner said.—New York Sun.

Kate Clyde's Opinion of the Directoire Modes; Says They Are Cruel, to Put It Mildly

It seems to me that the present styles are cruel, to say the least. They show exactly what you are, and if you are not what you should be, why, there you are! How's that?

In the old days—say a couple of years ago, when you had a flat bust—your dressmaker would plant a bosom or a couple of ruffles thereon and make you positively blossom out. Now ruffles and bosoms are tabooed, everything fits the form divine or otherwise, your dressmaker seeks to rise to the occasion by padding you, and the horrid thing doesn't hold its shape more than two days, sagging where nature never would give way and showing you up to the world for the fraud that you are.

Which reminds me of an incident. The prima donna of a comic opera troupe was recently taken ill, at least she said she was, and her role for the evening was assumed by her understudy, a young woman with a fine voice, which she must have carried in her boots, for there certainly wasn't room for it in her little narrow chest.

When she put on the singer's low necked bodice the contrast between the latter's opulent charms and her own straight lines was enough so that you could almost see a rift in the space. She drew what she could in by means of safety pins, and, seizing a copy of a red headlined yellow journal which happened to be lying around, she stuffed it down the yawning chasm. There was just time enough to go on.

Her aria began almost immediately. It gave her the opportunity of her life to reach a high note. She took it triumphantly, standing on tip-toes, with her voice swelling and reaching through the theater. And what she heard as she reached earth again was a subdued but gradually increasing sizzle, then something seemed to touch her chin, and, looking down, she saw the newspaper had worked up so that it flouted to all the world the scare head, "Awful Murder!"

The Directoire Modes.

But, to return to the fashions, I beg of you, Messieurs Worth, Paquin and others, are we to have no respite, no compromise from these skin tight styles?

Is the fat lady to walk out for all the world to see her in her fatness and the lean one to rattle her bones in the slash skirt and skin tight long sleeves? Oh, my friends, what cruelty! Women's whole education is a web of conceit, a cloak of dissimulation, the hiding of her bad points and the bringing forth of her good ones, but how can she keep up this policy? How can she present a smiling false front to the world when everything is so tight it must be real!

You might as well take from lovely woman her powder puff, her rouge pot, her eyebrow pencil, her switch. But halt! Why go deeper into the mysteries of the toilet?

However, there are some things we can avoid if we will. The tall body need not wear the striped cutaway coat and narrow skirt, exposing two long attenuated feet. The fat little dumpling can do without the huge pleated ruff met by a mushroom hat which challenges her. Let them change clothes and be happy.

And why, my friends, perhaps the present sartorial scheme of things may be for our good, just as Lent is said to be and other penitential seasons of reflection, for it shows us up as we really are, without shams or disguises, and forces us to get busy and better ourselves from the foundations up if we possibly can.

Good luck to you and best wishes!

Men's Bizarre Headgear.

Who says men haven't their own bit of dress fads and weaknesses?

You would think it were spring in New York just now.

"Cause why?"

All the up to date young men are wearing green hats. The first time I saw this verdant headgear I thought I was at the Champs-Élysées. But, no! This was a sober young broker, and he wasn't me. Indeed, he was telling me that United Crackers preferred, which I bought last Saturday, had crumbled down another point.

Alas and alack!

Then I saw another hat and another and another until I had nothing but green in my eye, and it seemed the whole town was getting ready for St. Patrick's day.

It isn't that men admire the color. They are hypnotized into buying, just as women are.

A man seen one of these hats on a neighbor's head, and he exclaims, "Well, if that isn't the rottenest thing!" Then he sees two more like it.

Getting ready for St. Patrick's day.

It and says to himself: "Why be out of the procession? Be a sport, too, old chap!" And the next hat store shows him.

For the benefit of the uninitiated I will explain that the new "lid" is of the soft felt variety, somewhat Alpine in shape and moss toned in color. A fat man has just passed the window wearing one. It is too small for his head, but he feels a sport for all that. You can see it in his eye. I am told the sheath stocking is the latest, and from the description I trust and hope no one will discover anything later.

This is all right up to the ankle, then the split appears, which grows larger and larger until the gaw being which holds it is a good three inches apart.

For more conservative tastes this "split" is merely in flesh colored or even contrasting silk.

Why not leave off the stocking altogether?

An Unfortunate Experiment.

Sleeping out of doors is the fad of the moment. If you don't want to sleep entirely out of doors you have a little emula built for your head, while the rest of you stays inside.

Isn't you have a beautiful complexion and your hair grows like a two year old.

Yes, it, but don't be the way that Mary Ann Smith did in the old days.

She was up the stairs, she read about the head out of the window treatment in the October issue of the Woman's Home Companion. She looked hard at the pictures, and then, being progressive, she built a ledge of boards outside of her window barely wide enough to accommodate a pillow.

She proposed the window with a block of wood of a height sufficient to let her head through, and, having arranged herself with her hair just outside the window exactly as per rule, Mary went to sleep.

But the mischievous they had far superior disregard with her. She threw up her hands in a nightmare, and—plap!—out came the block of wood; also at the same moment—bang!—came the window as neat as any gullotine!

No, Mary was not killed. The squawks that filled the air testified to that. They woke the frightened

WIFE OF STEEL MAGNATE, BUT AMBITIOUS TO SING IN OPERA

Mrs. William E. Corey, formerly Miss Mabelle Gilman, declares that she has little inclination to achieve such triumphs, but has a decided willingness to make her mark as a prima donna. Mrs. Corey is really a coloratura soprano of no ordinary ability, and her voice has been trained admirably by Jean de Reszke and other prominent masters of the art of singing.

children, the cows, the horses. The very had also given very under the shed, pigs under the barn joined in the clamor, thinking one of their number was being slaughtered. Out rushed the farmer with his old shotgun, and he came within an arm's length of the round, yelling object outside of Mary's window, but fortunately, he saw in time his daughter's foot and the rest of her pointed skirtward inside the room. NEWS FROM SARTORIAL SOURCES.

Swan skins are the new idea of Parisian modistes not only for covering hat crowns, but for making the entire hat. They are natural skins tanned, and some are used in box effects for banding purposes. As the season advances fur fashions will be much in evidence, and the better qualities will find decided favor with women who dress really well. Sporty and other similar materials that lend themselves gracefully to draping are new covers in millinery trimmings.

The day when women fastened separate bodices and skirts together and combed. The many girls think that anything will do. There is no greater mistake, as uneven, rough or jagged princess gowns seem a long way removed, but in reality it is only a year or two back. Now even the most ordinary dressmaker can make the all in one gown and wonders why she ever thought it was easier to make a dress in two pieces than in one.

It is a mistake to economize on combs. The many girls think that anything will do. There is no greater mistake, as uneven, rough or jagged teeth not only break the hair, but often irritate the scalp. If one can afford it, tortoise shell makes an ideal comb. Those of ivory are equally good and even more costly. If celluloid is used, be certain that it is perfectly smooth on the points and side, also do not use it too near a flame, as it is inflammable. The teeth should be fine, strong and rounded.

From one of the fashions of the present season there is likely to be a much to be desired result. Wearers of directoire gowns are bound, if they do justice to their dresses and the dressmakers, to stand, so to say, at attention. They must not let their shoulders stoop or their knees bend. Their attitude must be almost that of the soldier, heads up, shoulders back, eyes straight. Thus, and thus only, are the right lines given to their gowns. And if we become accustomed to carrying ourselves after this fashion we shall establish a habit that will make no small difference in appearance.

There is now not the slightest amount of doubt concerning the short sleeve. It is entirely out of the style. They expect for elaborate and formal occasions. It is out of place on the street, in the shops and for church.

Large hats will be the favorites during the fall. One of the striking characteristics of the new style is the high, narrow crown, which is seldom big except in the directoire modes, but the circumference is enormous.

Selling Out Sale---Fresno's Famous Store---The Home of Bargains---The Store That Keeps Every Printed Promise---Selling Out Sale

SALE HOURS 9 A. M. TO 5 P. M

Many Thousands of Dollars Worth of New Goods to be Slaughtered

As stated in the opening announcement of our Selling Out Sale on September 20th, we started this sale with upwards of two hundred thousand dollars of merchandise, counting goods on hand and en route. Manufacturers with whom we placed orders last spring for Fall delivery, refused to accept our cancellations. Many thousands of dollars of new Fall merchandise have been opened and go on sale Monday. The entire stock must be sold. It's a gigantic task to think of disposing of such a tremendous stock in a short period of time, but with the aid of low prices we hope to succeed in accomplishing our object.

THE CROWDS WILL BE AT REDLICK'S TOMORROW. THOUSANDS OF BARGAINS WHEREVER YOU TURN. COME.

As our Mariposa street store was leased by us to Mr. Frank Hickman, who is already in possession, the balance of our stock has been moved into our I street stores, where the entire stock will be closed out. We start the selling of all men's, boys' and children's clothing tomorrow with a fixed and determined plan of making short work of the whole business. Hundreds of new garments, which we were unable to countermand, have arrived and are now placed on sale with the balance of our stock.

"THE ROYAL CHEF" WILL DISH UP DAINTY DISH FOR FRESNO THEATER GOERS FRIDAY NIGHT

Original whirlwind rollers in "The Royal Chef," at the Barton next Friday night.

The musical comedy, "The Royal Chef," comes to the Barton next Friday night, October 23rd, for one performance only.

The "Chef" was originally staged in Chicago and holds a record of over 300 nights at the Garrick theater. It was given its New York premier at the Lyric theater and was one of the first to win actual recognition for a Chicago musical production, with the critical press and public of the metropolis, who have usually exhibited strong antipathy toward anything theatrical not born on Broadway, until the "Chef" entered the field and proved itself pleasing and satisfactory enough to compel recognition, and a consecutive run of nearly four months to large and delighted audiences was the result. The entire press, without a single dissenting voice, declared it one of the best staged and best played musical plays seen in that city for years. The music, by Ben Jerome, is among the best that has been written in years, and the book, by George Stoddard, is not only built on original lines, but unfolds a coherent story, laughable in its handling and theme, and interesting from curtain to curtain. The music has had immense popularity, there being not a dull or unattractive number in the entire score. The sale of the latter by the publishers, having already exceeded the quarter million mark. Much of the music is orchestrated with a neatness and a tact which show Mr. Jerome has a great knowledge of instrumentation and its uses. The entire press, wherever the play has been seen, unite in declaring it not in years a business light, opera score heard which contains more of musical understanding and approval of what is suitable and effective in such work. The chorus is not only large numerically, but is a telling one, and the various ensembles are uncommonly good and move naturally to fine climaxes and beautiful stage pictures. The famous "Brothers" song first seen with "The Royal Chef" and all the original members with one or two exceptions are with the company, together with nearly all the producing cast. William H. Conley as the "Chef" has a colorful and, that fits him like a glove, and possesses a much better sense than the average opera comedian, is magnetic, intelligent and acts and sings with spirit and dash. Miss Malatesta, the prima donna, is a fine soprano, acts with animation and in appearance is a very attractive young woman.

HOW I TOOK MY WRINKLES OUT

After Facial Massage, Creams and Beauty Doctors Had Failed.

BL. HARRIETT META.

Trouble, worry and ill-health brought me deep lines and wrinkles. I realized that they not only greatly marred my appearance and made me look much older, but that they would greatly interfere with my success, because a woman's success, either socially or financially, depends very largely on her appearance. The homely woman, with deep lines and furrows in her face, must fight an unequal battle with her younger and better-looking sister.

I therefore bought various brands of cream and skin foods and massaged my face with most constant regularity, hoping to regain my former appearance. But the wrinkles simply would not go. On the contrary, they seemed to get deeper. Next I went to a beauty specialist, who told me she could easily rid me of my wrinkles. I paid my money and took the treatment. Sometimes I thought they got less, but after spending all the money I could afford for such treatment, I found I still had my wrinkles. So I gave up in despair and concluded I must carry them to my grave. One day a friend of mine who was versed in chemistry made a suggestion, and this gave me an idea. I immediately went to work making experiments and studying everything I could get hold of on the subject. After several long months of almost numberless trials—and discouragements, I finally discovered a process which produced most astounding results on my wrinkles in a single night. I was delighted beyond expression. I tried my treatment again, and lo and behold—my wrinkles were practically gone. A third treatment—three nights in all—and I had no wrinkles and my face was as smooth as ever. I next offered my treatment to some of my immediate friends, who used it with surprising results, and I have now decided to offer it to the public. Miss Gladys Desmond of Pittsburg, Pa., writes that it made her wrinkles disappear in one night.

Mrs. M. W. Graves of Bridgeport, Conn., states: "There is not a wrinkle left, my friends say I look 20 years younger. I consider young treatment a godsend to womankind." Mrs. James Barnes of Central City, S. D., writes: "The change is so great that it seems more a work of magic."

I will send further particulars to any one who is interested, absolutely free of charge. I use no cream, facial massage, face steamings or so-called skin foods; there is nothing to inject and nothing to injure the skin. It is an entirely new discovery of my own and so simple that you can use it without the knowledge of your most intimate friends. You apply the treatment at night and go to bed. In the morning, lo! the wonderful transformation. People often write me: "It sounds too good to be true." Well, the fact will tell. If interested in my discovery please address Harriett Meta, Suite 518 C, Syracuse, N. Y., and I will send you full particulars.

Did you ever hear a sermon as true as this: A man's life is full of crosses and temptations? He comes into this world without his consent and goes out against his will. When he is little, the big girls kiss him and when he is grown the little girls kiss him. If he is poor, he is a bad man; if he is rich, he is dishonest; if he needs credit, he can't get it; if he is prosperous, every one wants to do him a favor. If he is in politics, it's for the pie; if he is out of politics, you can't find a place for him. If he doesn't give to charity, he is stingy; if he does, it's for show. If he is religious, he is a hypocrite; if he is not, he is a hardened sinner. If he gives affection, he is soft; if he cures for no one, he is cold-blooded. If he dies young, there was a great future before him; if he lives to an old age, he has missed his calling. The road is rocky, but man loves to travel it, especially if he is lucky in picking out things to do. Make the resolves today to become one of our customers. It will take that load of worry off your mind. We'll do the worrying for you. We'll insure every article we sell you, and replace it if it should go wrong. Take a tip from me, you can't afford to buy your hats, shirts, underwear, neckwear and clothing elsewhere. "Willie" with "Johnny Jones" has a well defined plot, too, and a couple of love stories, that run throughout the three acts in which it has been written. Then there are no less than twenty special song numbers—six from the pen of George M. Condon, and therefore distinctly wholesome. Here are the names of a few that have and are being whistled and sung in almost every tongue: "They're All My Friends," "Mammy's Favorite," "Up in the 'Canons,' " "Swinging a New York Tree," "I'm a Goodie Guy," "Glad of the S. A.," "Captain of the Ten Day Boat," "Good-bye Rio," "Good Old California," "A Good I Know," "LIFE'S A Very Funny Proposition After All," "Off to the Army," and "My My Regards to Broadway."

As to the scenery and costumes, "Johnny Jones" can claim an elaborate and effective an investment as any company on tour. Seldom has there been a more perfect marine picture depicted than that which comprises the second act in Mr. Condon's comedy, which represents a place at Southampton, with an ocean greyhound ready to sail. At the end of this act the ship leaves her dock, the stage is darkened, and in a moment the vessel is seen away in the offing, brilliantly lighted, as the ship nears the center of the stage, a red, white and blue rocket is sent up from her main deck, making an effect seldom seen in a playhouse. Another effective scene is the third act, which represents a certain portion of Chinatown in San Francisco. During this scene there is a march, entitled, "The March of the Frisco Chinks," participated in by the entire male and female chorus, the costumes of the same being most effective.

FORBIDS VOTE ON SALOON QUESTION

Writ of Mandate Issued By Judge Austin.

Words "For Granting Liquor License" to Be Stricken from Ballot.

Judge Austin issued an alternative writ of mandate yesterday morning forbidding County Clerk Miles from putting the words "For granting liquor license" on the ballots for the general election on November 2. The hearing on the writ will come up Monday morning.

Judge Austin took this action because of a petition filed by A. Mattel, through his attorneys, Snow & Freeman, in which he seeks to have the saloon question eliminated from the general election.

The matter will come up Monday and at the same time it is expected that Judge Austin will render a decision in the mandamus suit of Irving Bristol against the city trustees.

The petition of A. Mattel was filed yesterday morning. The action taken by the court in the matter did not come as a surprise, however, for it had been rumored about the court house that such a move was to be taken.

About 6000 ballots have been printed and if the alternative writ is made permanent, these will be wasted, as they cannot be used.

SMALL FIRE CALLS OUT DEPARTMENT

An alarm of fire was rung in from Fresno and Mckenzies streets yesterday afternoon about 4 o'clock. The fire was in the matter did not come as a surprise, however, for it had been rumored about the court house that such a move was to be taken.

On Thursday evening the members of the A. M. E. church entertained at the parsonage in honor of their new pastor, Reverend Price, and his wife, who have recently come to take charge of the work here. A most enjoyable evening was arranged for the pastor and his wife by the following committee: Mrs. Della Robinson, Mrs. Lulu Penn, Mrs. Tom Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Mitchell, Mr. and Mrs. George Watkins, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Clark, Reverend Morgan of the Baptist church and Reverend and Mrs. Mills of Zion M. E. church.

Airship to Startle the World
A distinct type of flying machine about which the greatest secrecy has been maintained, will appear soon. Louis Nixon, who built the highest type of battleships for the United States navy, claims that the new airplane will revolutionize present construction of heavier-than-air vessels.

Ten days before Andrew D. Green, the "Father of Greater New York," was assassinated, he said to Mr. Nixon: "We will contribute $10,000 each to finance the plans of an inventor whom I feel sure is able to navigate the air with a machine that is not rated by gas."

Mr. Nixon assented, but Mr. Green was slain before plans were completed. The new machine will be raised by two horizontal propellers. By shifting the body in the direction he wishes the machine to move, the inventor claims to be able to direct it.

It has been demonstrated that this machine will develop remarkable speed, power and maneuverability.

"All that I care to say," says Mr. Nixon, "is that I consider that this new machine will startle the world, and result in the introduction of new methods in the construction of heavier than air flying machines."—New York American.

The Splendid Old-World Roads.
The country roads of central Europe are so magnificent that they make our highways seem barbarous," said Mr. A. J. McCallum of Philadelphia at the Eutaw house.

"I traversed many sections of Germany and never did have such a glorious outing, all due to the smooth and thoroughly built roads. The people over there enjoy them quite as much as the American tourist, and cheerfully pay the taxes necessary to keep their highways in prime condition."

"Indeed, I believe there is more of civic pride in Europe than with us. As an instance, you will never see a scrap of waste paper lying in a street or in one of the parks or other. The streets are kept in much cleaner condition than ours, and no obstructions of any kind are allowed. The horrible billboard nuisance is nowhere tolerated."—Baltimore American.

"Why don't you kill that dog?" asked a bystander of the official dog catcher of Muskogee.

"What? Kill him? Why, he's my official assistant. He is the dog teaser. Without him I couldn't make a living," replied the dog catcher.

The small but good natured dog following the official dog cage in used as a teaser by the dog catcher. Being a friendly dog, he stops and has a tail wagging match with every canine he meets.

This gives the dog catcher time to get out his rope and hook and to get a grip on any dog that does not wear a tag showing the city tax of $2 has been paid for him.

The "loner" dog seems to know his business, and takes a keen delight in turning a strange dog within reach of his master—Muskogee, Oklahoma. Dispatch to Chicago Inter-Ocean.
